

Our Commitment to Sustainability

At House & Jackson, our passion for animals goes beyond providing excellent veterinary care. We believe that the wellbeing of pets, people, and the planet are all connected. That's why we're dedicated to running our practice in a way that reduces our environmental impact and supports a healthier future for every living being.

How We Care for the Planet

We've made a conscious effort to bring sustainability into our daily work, including:

Recycling as much waste as we can, including batteries and toner cartridges

Reducing the amount of paper we use by thinking before we print

Contacting clients by email or phone where possible

Lights on motion sensors to reduce energy usage

Hand driers in our bathrooms to save on hand towels

Bulk ordering to reduce the number of deliveries that need to be made to us

Asking our clients about disposing of unused medication in the correct way

Having useable cutlery and crockery and, of course, providing biodegradable poop bags!

The continuing journey

We know that sustainability isn't just about one or two changes, it's about many small, moves to continually improve our commitment to sustainability. There is still much we can do better but we're always looking for new ways to improve and welcome ideas from our clients.

Together, we can help create a brighter, more sustainable future, where pets, people, and nature all thrive side by side.
